

DEWEY SNUBS SULTAN.

Admiral Shows Lack of Appreciation of Horse Tails

---

By Refusing To Visit the Sublime Porte He Forfeits Title to Decoration.

Special Dispatch to Com. Tribune.

Pittsburg, July 20.—Admiral Dewey wants no horse tails in his. He plainly said so, when a day or two ago, he declined to stop at Constantinople in response to the urgent invitation sent to him by Oscar S. Straus, Minister to Turkey.

Deweys refusal to go to the Sublime Porte amounts to a snub to His Majesty, Abdul, the Sultan of the Ottoman Empire. A year ago the Sultan sent Admiral Dewey a message of congratulations, and decorated him with the Order of Husan Medjidie of the first class. That made Dewey a Pasha of the third class, the highest, and entitled to have an out-runner go before him when he appeared in public, bearing aloft on a standard three horse tails.

He has practically ignored the bestowal of the tails upon himself, although he acknowledged the receipt of the Sultan's message. To properly acknowledge the honor of being decorated, the recipient must appear before the Monarch, bestowing it and personally express his appreciation. This Edward Longard, of Pittsburg, railroad construction engineer, who is a native of Austria, and familiar with the distance of Constantinople. In that way he expressed his indifference to the honor.

Turkish court etiquette, said:
"By his failure to call on the Sultan, Admiral Dewey has forfeited the honor bestowed upon him. Dewey was given the license to have the decoration made by the royal jeweler. The decoration costs about $1,000, which is paid by the person upon whom it is bestowed."

Flowers but no Future, Honors Be

No Hope. Love But No Light.

New York, July 25.—The funeral of the late Robert G. Ingersoll took place this afternoon from Walston, Dodd Ferry, where he died on Friday last. No clergyman was present to conduct the services.

duct the services, there was no music and there were no pallbearers. The body lay on a cot in the room where he died. It was enshrouded in white and just the red rose was placed on the breast. About the cot were banks of floral tributes sent by friends, wreaths and bunches of flowers.

The services were held at 4 o'clock. Mrs. Ingersoll sat beside her dead, and beside her were her daughters, Mrs. Walston and Mrs. Brown and Miss Maud Ingersoll. They were very much agitated and wept almost constantly. Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Farre

There were some forty others present, and they remained standing throughout. The intense silence was then broken by Dr. John Clark Rouse, Colonel Ingersoll's old friend, occupied a chair by the side of the bier.

"My friends, it is a very sad duty to read in the presence of the dead the last poem written by Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll entitled 'Declaration of the Free.' This poem Colonel Ingersoll

Major O. J. Smyth, who resides at Dodd's Ferry, and who was a close personal friend of Colonel Ingersoll, then, without preliminary words, read another extract from Colonel Ingersoll's diary:

Dr. John Elliott, of New York, read the funeral oration delivered by Colonel Ingersoll over his brother's dead body. This concluded the short and simple services. Nearly all present then took a parting look at the deand passed out. Mr. Rouse arose, his chair, and, as he is totally blind, passed his hand over the face of his parted friend, and said:

"Perhaps he is better now, no one can understand it."
Mrs. Ingersoll said to him: "T

Colonel wanted you to put your hand upon his heart," and, sulking action to the word, she directed her hand to the left breast of the deceased.

Mr. Rouse asked what she was going to do with the remains. "I can not give him up," she said. "I can not bury him in the ground. I can not bear think of it. We're going to bring him back home."
